WONDERFUL RESOURCES

-OF-

I O W A.

Few eastern people realize the size and fertility of Iowa, the most beautiful of prairie states. Its area is over 35 000,000 acres, making it equal to the states of New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland, combined.

For the year 1880 the value of its principal agricultural products, including corn, wheat, rye, oats, barley, potatoes and hay, exceeded $125,000,000; this sum considerably exceeds the total value of the above products in the states of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Jersey and Delaware. It also exceeds the value of similar products of all the following southern states, viz: Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana. When it is remembered that the area of the southern states named is seven times that of Iowa, the wonderful productiveness of this great state can be realized.

It is admitted that Iowa will soon rank as the first agricultural state in the Union; the census of 1880 shows the population to be over 1,600,000 and all this is the growth of less than half a century.

This great state is represented by only one Agricultural Weekly; The Iowa Homestead, of Des Moines, has weathered the storms of twenty-six years, and is now recognized as the especial representative of this great agricultural state, and the ablest exponent of its wonderful industrial resources. — New York Independent.

In connection with the change in form and enlargement, we have thought it advisable to abbreviate the somewhat cumbersome name of Western Stock Journal and Farmer to Western Farm Journal, as above. This brings it almost to the original name "Farmers Journal," under which it was established at Cedar Rapids in 1872. Since that date the following papers have been consolidated with our Journal: In 1875 the Farmers' Stock Journal; in 1876, the Fine Stock Gazette, of Vinton, Iowa; In 1877, the Producer and Progressive Farmer, and this year the Farmers' Advocate, of Grinnell. The united circulation and strength of all these papers give to The Western Farm Journal a place no other paper can hope to attain among western farmers.

PREFACE.

The value of a city directory lies chiefly in the degree of accuracy with which the location of each resident is indicated therein. Des Moines has now assumed such proportions—its limits have expanded to such dimensions, and her population increases so rapidly by immigration that a directory, published annually, at least, and promptly, has become an absolute necessity. In endeavoring to supply that want the publishers of this volume have not aimed to prepare a book any larger than was necessary to contain the needed information. It was not their design to print a history of the city; the time for that has not yet come; nor did they fill their pages with fulsome prophecy of greatness to be achieved; for that is as apparent to one as to another. The object sought to have been accomplished is the correct location of each resident, his occupation, and a complete catalogue of the business houses and institutions of the city. The work to secure correctness in these particulars has been indefatigable, and this directory is sent out with the consciousness that it is the most accurate and complete resident guide ever laid before the citizens of Des Moines. The directory will be issued annually, a time for its publication will be fixed, and it will be gotten out with as much promptness as the intricate character of the work will permit.

Thanking the public for the liberal patronage extended to this, our first effort, we subscribe ourselves

Very respectfully,

A WORD ABOUT DES MOINES.

Iowa, containing a population of a million and three-quarters, and yet but comparatively sparsely settled, with favorable climate and unsurpassed agricultural and mineral resources, has within her borders no large city. This is a singular circumstance and has been the cause of much conjecture. Nearly every state in the union, and especially every northern state, has some chief commercial centre around which cluster the general business interests of the commonwealth; affording a market for the surplus products, exchanging the manufactured article for the raw material, which in turn is converted into objects of marketable value. Manufacturing industries are a valuable adjunct to the building up of large cities. The growth of Minneapolis has resulted largely from the diversion of an excellent water-power from its natural river channel and its conversion into a motive force for the driving of various kinds of machinery. Mercantile interests alone are generally slow in establishing populous communities; but in combination with manufacturing industries, a complete system of railway connections with the outside world, and business activity and judgment characterizing the acts of representative citizens the increase of population and wealth should be rapid. Minneapolis to-day would have been a smaller city than Des Moines but for the enterprise of such of her citizens as the Washburne's, the Pillsbury's, and others of like character, who converted the town into the great flour manufacturing centre of the world.

But few more years will pass before Iowa will contain a city of 50,000 population, and which will rapidly reach 100,000. That city will be Des Moines. The development of this city in the past few years has proved a surprise to the state, but our growth within the coming ten years will surprise ourselves. This directory shows that we have a population of over 30,000. Past growth will be of interest in connection with the figures. It is illustrated by the following data:

POPULATION OF DES MOINES IN

1846.....	127	1870.....	12,035
1850.....	502	1875.....	15,782
1860.....	3,965	1880.....	22,598
1865.....	5,650

The causes of this creditable growth are obvious. Des Moines is the centre of the great coal producing section of the state. The Iowa mines are but partially developed, but they are attracting new capital and fresh energy from many directions. Easy of access and exhaustless in supply, the Iowa coal fields furnish a cheap source of power for driving machinery, thus attracting the manufacturer from the less inviting fields. The institutions that have led the way, and are the pioneer enterprises, are prospering and finding a yearly increase of business. And numerous other and larger institutions are coming almost daily. The favorable location of Des Moines and her rapid development in all the essentials of a great city are attracting attention in other states. A Chicago paper of a late date gives the following truthful resume of the present situation:

The capital city of Iowa is not only the headquarters of the political and social movements of the state, but in contrast to most of the capital cities of the states of the union, is also a railroad center and a manufacturing city of magnitude. During the past ten years the city has doubled her population, and in the near future will be the leading city west of Chicago, the reasons for which are obvious. In the first place, the city is located in the midst of the richest and most productive agricultural region in the west. Then she is so located that a railroad center at this point is inevitable, and what seldom happens at the seat of government in any state, is the immense and growing manufacturing interests. To-day Des Moines has two distilleries, one of which is the largest in the world; a glucose factory, of immense proportions; a starch factory that will employ during the coming summer nearly two hundred men and women; two large packing houses that slaughter nearly 200,000 hogs annually; a paint manufactory that will soon supply the western country with the most needful article; a woolen mill that will provide a home market for this important product; two large linseed oil mills that provide a home market for this profitable agricultural product; three of the largest boiler works in the western country; and an endless number of machine shops. So that with the present boom in the way of building, it is no wonder that, in spite of the muddy streets of former days, any man may feel proud to say that he hails from the capital city of Iowa.

TRADE AND IMPROVEMENTS.

The year 1881 was probably the most prosperous in the history of the city. New buildings and improvements were conducted on a larger scale than in any other single year. Trade in all its branches greatly increased, the aggregate transactions reaching nearly sixty millions, designated as follows:

Wholesale trade.....	$20,681,781
Manufacturers.....	12,788,781
Grain and produce.....	2,770,250
Pork packing.....	2,563,000
Building and improvements.....	3,520,970
Coal production.....	1,175,750
Retail trade.....	13,622,042
	$57,081,583

The item of buildings and improvements include the erection of seven hundred and twenty-five residences and thirty-seven business blocks. The prospect now is that the record of last year will be surpassed this season, notwithstanding the increased cost of material and higher wages. Several residences surpassing in elegance anything now in the city are in contemplation, while the number of smaller homes already under way is legion. A large number of business blocks, some of which will compare favorably with our present imposing fronts, are also in course of construction.

DES MOINES STREETS.

The city council has let contracts for the paving of over three miles of streets, and the work is now well under way. The material used is cedar blocks. Before another winter mud will be a thing of the past on our principal thoroughfares. The street railway service is being also extended, and a continuous line of track will soon extend from Cottage Grove to a point east of the new capitol, and from Fifth and Walnut streets to North Des Moines. The efficiency of the service will also be greatly increased, and it is likely the time is not far distant when the public demand for a car every five minutes will be supplied.

RAILROADS.

The excellent railroad facilities, connecting Des Moines with the surrounding country in nearly every direction, have been a very potential factor in its development. The Rock Island was practically the first road to reach the city, the first regular passenger train reaching here over that line September 9th, 1867. Being pushed on rapidly to Council Bluffs, it has continued to hold the heavy bulk of travel acquired by its early prestige. It has fully kept pace with the public demands in the matter of passenger and freight accommodations, and to-day no finer trains of cars cross the prairies of Iowa than those of the great Rock Island. The near future will find it with a double track from Davenport to the Mississippi river.

The other railways centering here are the Chicago & Northwestern, Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific, Keokuk & Des Moines, Des Moines & Ft. Dodge, Des Moines Northwestern, Des Moines, Indianola & Missouri, Des Moines, Winterset & Southwestern, Des Moines, Osceola & Southern, and the St. Louis, Des Moines & Northern.

The projected lines are the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul; Wisconsin, Iowa & Nebraska (so-called "Diagonal") and the Des Moines & Kansas City. It is probable that all three of these lines will reach us this summer. They are all important roads, and their coming means a great deal to the future of Des Moines. Through Minneapolis & St. Louis trains will undoubtedly run here at an early day, thus giving direct communication with that important point. With the consummation of these projects there will remain nothing more to be desired in the matter of additional railway facilities.

The activity in real estate is greater than ever; capital is seeking investment in legitimate interests; and the outlook was never so encouraging. The coming five years will be years fraught with prosperity and growth to a rare degree. It is the duty, as it should be the pleasure, of every citizen to aid in that direction. Des Moines should no longer be content with the appellation of "Metropolis of Iowa;" it should be her aim to surpass any city between Chicago and the mountains, north of St. Louis. The possibilities are hers. Let her people be content with nothing less.
